JULY CLEARANCE SALES

The most important item and steel suspension which can be attributed directly to the operation of the Wilson-Underwood "free trade" tariff law has been that of the Alt in Steel Company. This company has been between the Alt in "future" and the present "free trade" law is an almost it is possible for anything to be it is almost as if to startling.

The Alt in Steel Company possess a large and modern mill that is new and modern in its design. It was built and started upon a short time ago by a member of an old Pittsburgh family that had been manufacturing iron and cotton ties for many years until they sold their Pittsburgh plant to the American Steel Company, now owned by the Carnegie Steel Company. This was not one of the old brick down unknown industrial works that ought to have come down long ago, but was a modern one of which the management consisted of a group of experts and economists who have been speaking since the Wilson-Underwood bill became a law. It is up to date in every particular, efficient in every way and a well known steel bridge maker. It has a reputation of being a successful builder of free trade law was placed on the nation's statute books.

It will be recalled that just a week or two ago the Iron Trade announced that the Alt in Steel Company had sold out for a bundle of the price, it would ask for this year's output. A day or so ago it was explained further just why this price had been decided upon and the reason given was that since foreign makers of cotton ties destined for American cotton presses had fixed on a price of $10.00 per ton, the Alt in Steel Company, the leading American maker had decided to sell just a few cents under the foreign price in 7% dividend. On Oct. 1st that figures back it also per bundle, Pittsburgh base. It also was pointed out that the Iron Trade had been dominated by American manufacturers, at least in the past five years. So in order to hold its share of the American market for cotton ties, the largest manufacturer of this product was forced to reduce its price to the present level, a price which amounts to about 144c a pound for the ties including freight. There is so little of profit in this price for the manufacturer that it is a question whether the other American cotton tie rollers will enter the trade this year.

The southern cotton roller will get his cotton this night, close this year, thanks to the Wilson-Underwood "free trade" tariff, which has brought him a price for his cotton ties that has never had been seen before in the United States. And from all directions. And at every point on the Atlantic and Pacific coasts. Now it has penetrated to the interior.

It is not to be expected that all geographies will cotton ties than this year, but the Alt in Steel Company, Alt in, has been forced to the wall.

SCOTTDALE

Special to The Courier.
SCOTTDALE, July 15.—The big crowd of the Chautauque gathered Tuesday evening in the big tent at Leacock park to hear the Zimmler-Havens Trio in some very delightful music, and the drama, "Shakespeare's Twelfth Night" by the Ben Greer Players. The three young ladies of the trio gave a harp, violin and piano performance, but the Ben Greer Players had the real attraction in a "comic drama" by the heavy rainstorm that poured away for over an hour. The players had almost completed the first scene when the rain poured down. It was both violent and steady, and the roar of the rain drowned the voices of the players. The tent stood the onslaught of the rain in splendid shape, but few people having to move away from where a few drops came through at intervals not drawn thick enough. The audience was very comfortable and no complaint was made of the conditions, everyone taking their apparently as a Chautauque adventure.

There was but little wind and some thunder and lightning. The rain was terrific, and washed the streets clean, ran over curbs and recently behaved hysterically. It showed for one thing what an excellent tent the Chautauque has. When the rain moderated the players started and sang a most excellent rendition of the comedy.

The lovers of melodrama will be delighted with the picture today at the Solon Theatre. First comes the four reel thrilling drama, "Fighting Death," and next the two-reel film from "The Old Cobler." Then there is a good joke comedy, "Love and Electricity." The Animated Weekly No. 120 is shown with two different comedies, "The Love" with Harry Tenny, and Saturday, the famous actor, Budlin, in the six part play of "The Roman Man."

For balance of week only "Stevens S. Q." Gold-filled Eyeglasses—every pair guaranteed by the makers—fitted with my own lenses—Including examination, $1.00.

All "Stevens" frames and mountings are stamped on the bridge—"Stevens S. Q."—Look for it—don't take my word. They are gold filled—gold mounted—gold lined—guaranteed by Stevens & Company, (Inc.) of Providence, R. I., and myself—and will be replaced at any time if they fail to give satisfaction.

Caution about the Use and Selection of Spectacles.

Persons having normal vision will be able to read text at a distance of 18 inches from the eye with ease and comfort; also will be able to read it with each eye separately. If a person's eyes are defective and cannot have immediate attention. When the eyes are strained from reading or sewing, or if the eyes look blurred and run together it is a sure indication that there is some defect in the vision. If the eyes are of normal vision and have perfectly formed lenses in positive focus on the constant strain upon the muscles of accommodation to supply the defect in the eyes.

Creolol has been used for 20 years by hospitals and physicians. It should be more used in private homes because it prevents disease, by destroying the germs which bring disease.

Death to Germs and Insects; Healing to Man.

From three letters by physicians we quote:—

"For about 12 years I have been using Creolol. I pronounce it the best disinfectant for general use."

"Creolol in my practice has superseded all other germicides. I have used it exclusively for 12 years."

"I have used Creolol in private and hospital practice. It has a special curative action on all diseases of the mucous membrane."

FABLES IN SLANG

GEORGE ADE

THE NEW FABLE OF THE HONEY-MOON THAT TRIED TO COME BACK.

Once there was an undivorced couple that would get up every G. M. and put on the five-ounce Mitts and wait for the Sound of the Gong.

Each was working for the Championship of the Flat and proved to be a Union for Punishment.

Every time he landed a crashing Hay-Maker on her Family History she countered with a short-term Jolt on his Personal Appearance.

Both would retire to the Corners breathing heavily, but still full of Combat.

He loved to start out the Day by finding in the Paper what a Professor connected with the University of Chicago had said about the American Woman being a vain and shallow Parasite with a Cerebrum about the size of an English Walnut.

She would retaliate by reading aloud a special in regard to a Husband going after Wife with A. Z. while under the influence of Liquor.

After which, for 16 or 20 minutes, the Dining Room would be just as peaceful and quiet as a Gamorn Trial. Sometimes he would get First Blood, but just as often she would fiddle around for an Opening and then Zowie!—right on the Cook and him Stalling to escape further punishment.

When Nightfall came they would still be edging around the Ring, whanging away, for each was too Game to be a Quitter.

Their Married Life, which started out with American Beauty Roses in every Vase and a long Piece in the Pa-

True Affection pruned and watered by Devotion and Sacrifice.

Therefore, he made one large Vow to cut out the Rough Stuff.

Next Morning when the Queen of the Amazons put on her Paint and Feathers and began to beat the big War Drum there was Nothing Doing.

He refused to enter the blood-stained Arena and when she came after him he fell over and took the Count before a Punch had been delivered.

Before starting for the Office he Kissed her a couple of times and gave her some Massage Treatment around the Shoulder Blades and called her "Toots"—a Term of Endearment which had been rusting on the Shelf ever since they used it at Niagara Falls.

She was so dazed by this Reversal of Form that she peeked from the Front Window and watched him clear to the Corner, convinced that he was on his way to meet Another Woman.

He came home that Evening with a Jar of Cuddled Nuts and when Mrs. Simon Legree demanded the Name of the Hussy he simply pulled a Yearning Smile and invited her to go ahead and use him as a Punching Bag.

Next day she put a Newspaper around the Bird Cage and tied up the Granum and took the unfinished Tattling and Biew.

When she walked in on her Own People, with the Declaration that all Beta were Off, they wanted to know how about it, and she said a Spirited Woman couldn't keep on rooming with a Guinea-Pig.

MORAL—Contempt breeds Familiarity.

THE NEW FABLE OF THE LIFE OF THE PARTY.

One Night a Complimentary Dinner was given to a Captain of Industry by some Friends looking for Orders.

The Chairman of the Arrangements Committee was a popular Wine-Pusher, consequently the volunteer Search Parties were out for Three Days after, gathering up the Dead.

Along about 10:30, when every Perfect Gentleman was neatly Stewed and each Chambermaid was doing a sinuous Salome in time with the Hungarian Orchestra, a Man connected with the Jobbing Trade got up to say a Few Words.

He was keyed to Concert Pitch and the Audience was Piped and all the old sure-fire Rookum of a Sentimental Nature simply Killed them in their Seats.

When he concluded, the hilarious Fun Brothers, with the muzzledup Hair and the twisted Shirt Bonuses, arose to their Feet and waved Napkins and gave the Orator what he described to his Wife at 2 A. M. as a Novation.

Another Good man was spoiled. After Herman made this gushful Hit with the Souses he became convinced that he was an After-Dinner Wit.

One Thomas and Simeon Ford had nothing on him.

Whenever he found himself seated at a Table with other People and Food being served he began to suck Loxenges and classify his Anecdotes and try to appear Unconcerned.

All the time he was simply waiting for the Main Fluff to come up from behind the Chrysanthemums and, say, "We have with us this evening."

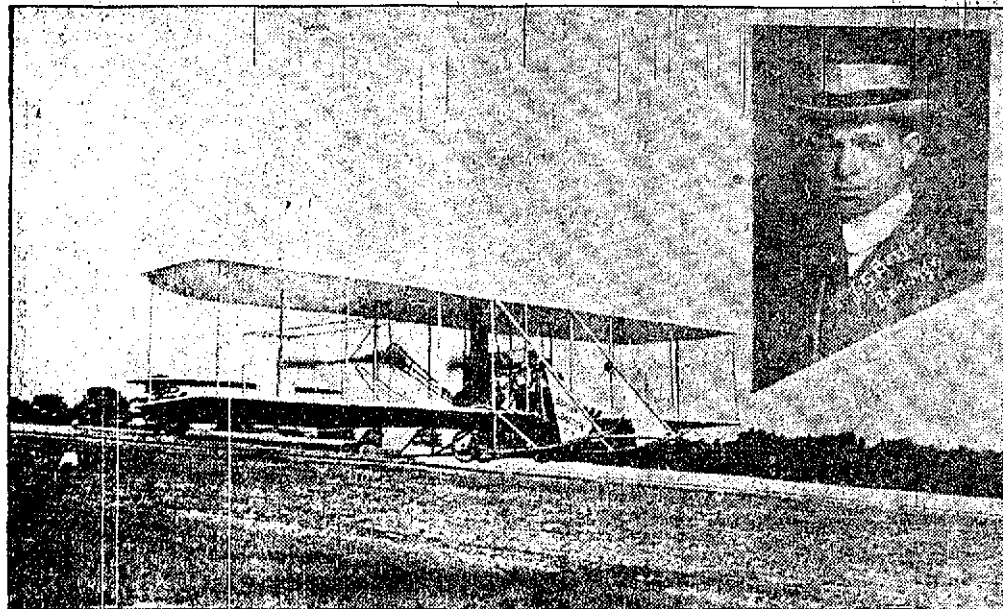

Then for the quiet Introduction, leading up to the sparkling Met and the Trumole Stop pulled all the Way out on the Pathos and a couple of Depews to put them in a Good Humor, concluding with a Hypodermic of Hot Muck.

If the Bunch sat back and refused to Fall for the War-Time Favorites he would console himself by telling around that he was up against the Low-Drows.

He knew that he was a Dinger, because he remembered how the Magnificent Assembly stood and cheered him for five Minutes.

Therefore his Voice sounded to him a good deal like the Boston Symphony

Aviator Heth Will Fly at Shady Grove; Good Flights Promised

Eugene Heth, one of the most daring aviators of the present day, arrived at Oakford Park, near Greensburg, today to begin a series of exhibition flights in his Wright passenger biplane at Oakford, Shady Grove and Olympia Parks, for the West Penn railways. He will give two flights a day at Oakford today and tomorrow and on Friday and Saturday will give similar flights at Shady Grove.

Heth is regarded as one of the best aviators in the business. He is absolutely fearless and yet not reckless, and he regards air aviation almost as safe as land travel. He has carried scores of passengers with him and never yet had an accident. Despite the dissimilarity of air currents, Heth expects to make successful flights on all six days of his engagement, carrying a passenger in any one has the nerve to try the trip.

Heth recently smashed the hoodoo that hovers over Pittsburgh and seemed to prevent successful flights over that city, by flying over Highland Park on July 4, carrying his son George, of Birmingham, Mich., to a height of 5,200 feet.

"Old Hickory."

The following story is told of how General Andrew Jackson got his title of "Old Hickory." Captain William Allen, who was a near neighbor of the general, messed with him during the Creek war. During the campaign the soldiers were moving rapidly to surprise the Indians and were without tents. A cold March wind came on, mingled with sleet, which lasted for several days. General Jackson got a severe cold, but did not complain as he tried to sleep in a muddy bottom among his half-dressed soldiers. Captain Allen and his brother, John, cut down a stout hickory tree, peeled off the bark and made a covering for the general, who was with difficulty persuaded to crawl under it. The next morning a drunken citizen entered the camp and, seeing the tent, kicked it over. As Jackson crawled from the ruins the toper cried: "Hello, Old Hickory! Come out of your bark and jine us in a drink."

"What a remarkable canary!" I observed to the proprietor.

"Oh, that isn't a canary," he replied. "It's an Indian thrush."

Kipling has described the music of the Indian thrush, whose song is the rarest of all tropical bird songs. Few of us in this climate, however, have had the exquisite pleasure of listening to such a madrigal.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

INDIAN BORN IN GERMANY.

Full Blooded Sioux Has Our Consul at Barmen as Her Godfather.

The first full blooded American Indian ever born in Germany recently saw the light of day near Dortmund, Westphalia. The child's father is a Sioux Indian from the Pine Ridge agency, William Bear Shield, and the mother is Mary Bear Shield. The father is now in America, but the mother is a member of an Indian troupe touring Germany with a circus.

The birth took place in a typical American prairie wagon while the troupe was en route from Dortmund to Necklenghausen.

The mother was anxious that her little papoose, who is a girl, should be duly registered in the German records as an American citizen and a Christian. To that end she sought the nearest American consul, George Eugene Baker, who represents the United States at Barmen.

The baby was born on June 29, but as the Fourth of July was approaching the baptism was deferred until then. Mr. Baker acted as godfather for the child, who was christened Maria Consuela.

Telling Your Age.

I know you won't believe me when I tell you that I'm only sixteen, but really when I was nine years old people used to take me for twenty. I was always mature and sensible, and I've always thought a whole lot, and thought is bound to leave its mark on you. Why, my father had gray hair when he was sixteen, but that doesn't mean anything. I have a friend who's only fourteen and yet everybody takes him for a man of sixty. You can't always judge by appearances because I have another friend who's thirty-eight and has a family and yet he looks so young people take him for his own son. I know you think I'm not telling the truth, but why people should lie about their age is more than I know.—New York Sun.

OLD LADY NUMBER 31

LOUISE FORSSLUND
AUTHOR OF "THE STORY OF SARAH," "THE SHIP OF DREAMS," ETC. COPYRIGHT, BY THE CENTURY CO.

Smiling to himself, he concluded that he would try the effect of the tonic when he reached home again. He drew his hand back, whispering once more, "Good-night, mother." Then he fancied he could hear her say in her soft, reassuring tone, "Good-night, mother." But when he turned back on the empty wall, praying with a sudden rush of passionate love that when the last call should come for him, it would be after he had said "Good-night, mother," to Amy and after she had said "Good-night, father," to him, and that they might wake somewhere, somehow, together with God, saying, "Good-morning, mother," "Good-morning, father!" And "Pax is the day!"

CHAPTER XVII.

The Deserter.

At dawn the station was wide awake and everybody out of bed. Samuel crept downstairs in his stocking feet, his boots in his hand, his eyes heavy with sleepiness, and his wig awry. He shivered as he drew close to the fire, and asked for some breath for a prescription for chilblains and where might Abe be. Abe's lounge was empty and his blankets neatly folded upon it.

The surly patrol from the east, who had just returned, made reply that he had met Captain Abe walking along the surf to get up an appetite for his griddlecakes and salt pork. Samuel sat down suddenly on the lounge and opened his mouth.

"Didn't he have enough exercise yesterday, for mercy's sake! Put 'nigh killed me! I was that tired his night I couldn't sleep a wink! I declare, I 'sant for that fool newspaper a-comin out tonight I'd go home tomorrow. Yee a wile ago, ain't yer, Haven't?"

Haven't laughed in response. Samuel glowered at him. "I want some comfort back," he roared suddenly. "The beach isn't what it used to be. Gals on a picnic with Abe Rose is like getting yer teeth into a cast-iron stove lid covered with a thin layer o' puddin'. I'm a good home."

The keeper assured him that no one would attempt to detain him if he found the station uncomfortable and that if he preferred to leave Abraham behind the wheel, for he would take pleasure in entertaining the more restless of men.

"That old fellow bates a phonograph, affirmed the Irishman. 'It's good for hear that he'll be left alone for company with this storm a-comin' up'."

Samuel rushed to the window, for upstairs the panes had been too frosty for him to see out. A storm coming up. The beach did look gray and desolate, discolored in the dull light of the early day, with the winter-killed grass and the stunted green growth of cedar and holly and pine only making patches of darkness under a gray sky which was filled with scurrying clouds. The wind, too, had risen during the night, and the increased roar of the surf was telling of foul weather at sea.

A storm threatening! And the pleasant prospect of being shut in at the beach with the cast-iron Abraham and these husky life-savers for the remainder of the winter! No doubt Abe would insist upon helping the men with the double duties imposed by thick weather, and drag Samuel out on patrol.

"When dew yew start, Haven't?" demanded Samuel in shaking tones. "Let's get off afore Abe sits back an' tells yer he's here. He seems ter be so pleased stuck on the life over here, he'll think I must be too."

But, though Haven't had to wait for the return of the man who had gone off duty yesterday morning, still Abe had not put in an appearance when Samuel and the life saver trudged on the trail through the woods of bay. As he stepped into the scouter Samuel's conscience at last began to prick him.

"Yew sure the men will look after the old fellow well an' not let him overdo."

But the whizz of the flight had already begun and the scouter's nose was set toward Twin Cove, her sail skimming swiftly with the ring of the steel against the lee over the shining surface of the bay.

"Law, yee," Samuel eased his conscience; "of course they will. They couldn't hurt him, anyhow. I never seen anybody take so kindly ter hard-earned as that air Abe."

CHAPTER XVIII.

Samuel's Welcome.

The shore at Twin Cove was a somewhat lonely spot, owing to stretches of marshland and a sweep of pine wood that reached almost to the edge of the water.

Samuel, however, having indicated that he wished to be landed at the foot of a path through the pines, found himself on the home shore scarcely ten minutes after he had left Bleak Hill. Haven't already speeding toward his home some miles to the eastward, the day seemingly deserted except for his sail, a high wind blowing, and the snow beginning to fall in scattered flakes.

Samuel picked up his grip, trudged through the heavy sand of the narrow beach, and entered the sweet smelling pine wood. He was stiff with cold after the rough, swift voyage; his feet alone were hot—burning hot with chilblains. Away down in his heart he was uneasy lest some harm should come to Abe and the old man be caught in the approaching storm on the beach. But, oh, wasn't he glad to be home!

His house was still half a mile away, but he was once more on good, solid, dry land.

"I'll tell Blossy how that air Abe Rose behaved," he reassured himself, when he pictured his wife's astonished and perhaps reproachful greeting. "An' then she won't wonder that I had ter quit him an' come back."

He recollected that Amy would be there, and hoped fervently that she might not prove so strenuous a charge as Abraham. Moreover, he hoped that she would not so absorb Blossy's attention as to preclude a wifely ministrating to his aching feet and the agitation of "St. Jovushy lie" to his lame and sore back.

The torture of the feet and back made walking harder, too, than he had believed possible with the prospect of relief so near. As he limped along he was forced to pause every now and again and set down the carpetbag, sometimes to rub his back, sometimes to seat himself on a stump and nurse for a few moments one of those lame, unpossessed feet. Could he have made any progress at all if he had not known that at home, no matter if there was company, there would at least be no Abe Rose to keep him going, to spur him on to unrelenting action, to force him to prove himself out of sheer self-respect the equal, if not the superior, in masculine strength?

Abe had led him that chase over at the station, Samuel was convinced, "a purpose" to punish him for having so soundly berated him when he lay abed. That was all the thanks you ever got for doing things for "some folks."

Samuel hobbled onward, his brow knit with angry resentment. Did ever a half-mile seem so long, and had he actually been only twenty-three hours from home and Blossy? Oh, oh! his back and his feet! Oh, the weight of that bag! How much he needed sleep! How good it would be to have Blossy tuck him under the covers, and give him a hot lemonade with a stick of ginger in it!

If only he had held of Abe Rose now to tell him his opinion of him! Well, he reflected, you have to summer and winter with a person before you can know them. This one December day and night with Abe had been equal to the revelations of a dozen seasons. The next time Samuel tried to do good to anybody more than sixty-five, he'd know it. The next time he was persuaded into leaving his wife for over night, he'd know that, too. Various manuals for the young husband, which he had consulted, to the contrary notwithstanding, the place for a married man was at home.

Samuel sat down on a fallen tree which marked the halfway point between his place and the bay. The last half of the journey would seem shorter, and, at the end, there would be Blossy smiling a welcome, for he never doubted but that Blossy would be glad to see him. She thought a good deal of him, nor had she been especially anxious for that week of separation.

If his face smoothed his troubled frown into a look of shining anticipation—the look that Samuel's face had worn when first he ushered Blossy into his tiny little home and murmured huskily:

"Mis' Darby, yew're master o' the vessel now; I'm jest fo'castle hand." Forgetting all his aches, his pains, his recalcitrance, Samuel took a peppermint lozenge out of his pocket, rolled it under his tongue, and walked on. Presently, as he saw the light of the clearing through the trees, he broke into a run—an old man's trot—thus proving conclusively that his worry of lumbago and chilblains had been merely a wrongly diagnosed case of homesickness.

He grinned as he pictured Abe's dismay on returning to the station to find him gone. Still, he reflected, maybe Abe would have a better time alone with the young fellows; he had grown so plagued young himself all of a sudden. Samuel surely need not worry about him.

More and more good-natured grew Samuel's face, until a sociable rabbit, peeping at him from behind a bush, decided to run a race with the old gentleman, and hopped fearlessly out into the open.

"Ah, yew young rascal!" cried Samuel. "Yew're the fellow that eat up all my winter cabbage."

At this unseasonable reading of his mind Mr. Cottontail darted off into the woods again to seek out his mate and inform her that their guilt had been discovered.

Finally, Samuel came to the break in the woodland, an open field of rye, green as springtime grass, and his own exultantly neat abode beckoning across the gray rail fence to him.

How pretty Blossy's geraniums looked in the sitting-room window! Even at this distance, too, he could see that she had not forgotten to water his pet abutment and bogonias. How welcome in the midst of this flurry of snow—how welcome to his eyes was that smoke coming out of the chimney! All the distress of his trip away from home seemed worth while now for the joy of coming back.

Before he had taken down the fence-rail and turned into the path which led to his back door, he was straining his ears for the sound of Blossy's voice gossiping with Amy. Not hearing it, he hurried the faster.

The kitchen door was locked. The key was not under the mat; it was not in the safe on the porch, behind the stone pickle-pot. He tried the door again, and then peered in at the window.

Not even the cat could he discern. The kitchen was set in order, the breakfast dishes put away, and there was no sign of any baking or preparations for dinner.

He knocked, knocked loudly. No answer. He went to a side door, to the front entrance, and found that whole house locked, and no key to be discovered. It was still early in the morning, earlier than Blossy would have been likely to set out upon an errand or to spend the day; and then, too, she was not one to risk her health in such chilly, damp weather, with every sign of a heavy storm.

Samuel became alarmed. He called sharply, "Blossy!" No answer. "Mis' Rose!" No answer. "Ezra!" And still no sound in reply.

His alarm increased. He went to the barn; that was locked and Ezra nowhere in sight. By standing on tip-toe, however, and peeping through a crack in the boards, he found that his horse and the two-seated surrty were missing.

"Waal, I never," grumbled Samuel, conscious once more of all his physical discomforts. "The minute my back's turned, they go gallivantin'. I bet yer," he added after a moment's thought, "I bet yer it's that air Amy Rose. She's got ter git an' gad every second since she an' my poor wife has been drag along with aer."

There was nothing left for him to do but seek refuge in his shop and await their return. Like nearly every other bayman, he had a one-room shanty, which he called the "shop," and where he played at building boats, and weaving nets, and making oars and tongs.

This structure stood to the north of the house, and fortunately had an old, discarded kitchen stove in it. There, if the wanderers had not taken that key also, he could build a fire, and stretch out before it on a bundle of salt-cloth.

He gave a start of surprise, however, as he approached the place; for surely that was smoke coming out of the chimney!

Ezra must have gone out with the horse, and Blossy must be entertaining Amy in some outlandish way demanded by the idiosyncrasies of the Rose temperament.

Samuel hung upon the door, and strode in; but only to pounce on the threshold, struck dumb. Blossy was not there, Amy was not there, nor anyone belonging to the household. But sitting on that very bundle of canvas, stretching his lean hands over the stove, with Samuel's cat on his lap, was the "Old Hoss"—Abraham Rose!

CHAPTER XIX.

Exchanging the Olive Branch.

The cat jumped off Abe's lap, running to Samuel with a mew of recognition. Abe turned his head, and made a startled ejaculation.

"Sam! Darby," he said stubbornly, "er yew've come tow drag me back to that air beach, yew're wastin' time. I won't go!"

Samuel closed the door and hung his damp coat and cap over a suit of old oilskins. He came to the fire, taking off his mittens and blowing on his fingers, the suspicious and complimentary tail of his eye on Abraham.

"How'd yew git here?" he burst forth. "What yew bin an' doin' with my wife, an' my horse, an' my man, an' my kerridge? How'd yew git here? What'd yew come fer? When'd yew git here?"

"What'd yew come fer?" retorted Abe with some spirit. "How'd yew git here?"

"None o' yer darra business."

A glimmer of the old twinkling came back into Abe's eyes, and he began to chuckle.

"I guess we might as well tell the

"EFFICIENCY"

Efficiency is largely due to proper nourishment. Note the happy and contented look of the men in the above picture with their

and its hot contents. They are enjoying a nourishing meal, instead of the days of old, when cold tea or coffee accompanied their meal.

This not only applies to the men in the shop, but the Engineer, Fireman, Brakeman, Station Agent, Section Hand, Conductor and Motorman, in fact, men of all positions in life, who are obliged to carry their lunch with them.

The Daily Courier has been selected as one of a Syndicate of Newspapers throughout the United States to place within easy reach of its readers a thoroughly practical and necessary article, within the reach of every man.

The wide scope of this plan, made it possible to induce a very large Manufacturer to construct a special VACUUM BOTTLE of well-known quality, and it is only the enormous quantities in which these Bottles are manufactured that makes it possible to offer them on such liberal terms. So the DAILY COURIER offers to its readers the opportunity to secure, for a short time only, one or more of these guaranteed Vacuum Bottles.

truth, Sam! We both tried to be so all-fired young yesterday that we got played out, an' concluded unanimously that the best place for a A No. 1 spree was ter hum."

Samuel gave a weak smile, and drawing up a stool took the cat upon his knee. "Yes," he confessed grudgingly, "I found out fer one that I ain't no spring lamb."

"Ner me, nuther," Abe's old lips trembled. "I had eyester-sew an' drunk coffee in the middle o' the night; then the four-o'clock patrol wakes me up again. Here, 'bo a sport, they says, an' sticks a pleep o' hot mince pie under my nose. Thus I was so uneasy I couldn't sleep. Daybreak I got up, an' wait for a walk ter limber up my belt, an' I sorter wandered over ter the bay side, an' not a mile out I see tew men with one o' them big flamin' gooders a-bailin' in their net. An' I walked a ways out on the lee, a-signalin' with my handana han'tkercher; an' arter a time they seen me. 'T was Cap'n Ely from Jayun Head an' his boy. How them young 'uns dew grow! Las' time I see that kid, he wa'n't knee-high tow a grasshopper."

"Waal, I says tew 'em, I says 'Want ter drop a passenger at Twin Cove?' 'Yes, yee,' they says. 'Jump in.' An' so, Sam! I graduated from yer school o' hardenin' on top a ton o' squirmin' fish, more or less I thought I'd come an' git Amy," he ended with a sigh. "an' yer hired man'd drive us back for Shoreville; but that wa'n't nobody hum but a maw'n' cat, an' the only place I could git inter was this here shop. Wonder what the gals has gone?"

No mention of the alarm that he must by this time have caused at the station. No consciousness of having committed any breach against the laws of hospitality. But there was that in the old man's face, in his worn and wistful look, which curbed Samuel's tongue and made him understand that as a little child misses his mother so Abe had missed Amy, and as a little homesick child comes running back to the place he knows best so Abe was hastening back to the shelter he had scorned.

So, with an effort, Samuel held his peace, merely resolving that as soon as he could get to a telephone he would inform their late hosts of Abe's safety.

There was no direct way of telephoning, but a message could be sent to the Quogue station, and from there forwarded to Bleak Hill.

"I've had my lesson," said Abe. "The place fer old folks is with old folks."

"But"—Samuel recovered his authoritative manner—"the place for an old man ain't with old folks. Now, Abe, ef yew think yew kin behave yer self an' not climb the flagpole or jump over the roof, I want yer to stay right here, jaw an' Amy both, an' spend yer wack out. Yee, yee," as Abe would have thanked him. "I take it," plunging his hand into his pocket, "yew ain't scowed away nothin' since that mince pie; but I can't offer yer nothin' to eat till Blossy gets back an' opens up the house, 'cept these here popp'mints. They're fine; try 'em."

With one of those freshish turns of the weather that takes the conceit out of an weather-prophet, the snow had now ceased to fall, the sun was struggling out of the clouds, and the wind was swinging around to the west.

Neither of the old men could longer fret about their wives being caught in a heavy snow; but, nevertheless, their anxiety concerning the whereabouts of the women did not cease, and the homesickness which Abe felt for Amy, and Samuel for Blossy, rather increased than diminished as one sat on the roll of canvas and the other crouched on his stool, and both hugged the fire, and both felt very old, and very lame, and very tired and sore.
